JOHN MEDLEY HOUSE
Beachville
Private

circa 1900

This attractive, unpainted frame house has an L shape. The two-story principal block in front is three bays in length, one room in depth and has an A roof with a cross gable in which a small Roman-arched window is centered. The floor plan consists of a side passage with one room downstairs and two upstairs. The 1 1/2-story extension in back has one room on both floors. Its northern length and one gable end of the principal block are sheltered by a colonnaded shed porch. The house was built as the family residence of Johnny Medley at the turn of the 20th century on land inherited from his father, Richard Medley, one of the founders of the black community in Beachville. It shows more attention to architectural designs popular in that period than do most houses in the community. It is now abandoned.

according to Mr. Carroll.

The plan of the principal block is single parlor, side passage. The door leads to the open stairway, that is highlighted by a heavy turned newel post. The interior walls are lathed and plastered. The molded trim around the windows and doors inside and outside, along with the gable pediment with arc window reveal the stylistic aspirations ^{of} fo this family.

The house was probably built at the same time as Charles Medley house, c. 1890's, according to Mr. Carroll. The design and structural materials tend to confirm this.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Like the house built as the residence for Charles Medley (STMA-287), this house of his brother John is abandoned, its grounds overgrown, and the house is gradually rotting away. The two are located near one another, on land inherited by each brother from their father, Richard ^{MEDLEY} (STMA-289).

This house faces east, and is oriented perpendicular to the dirt drive that leads through abandoned fields from the St. Inigoes Rd. Like the Charles Medley House, this dwelling consists of a principal block with an ^L extending from the rear length. Its principal block is three bays in length, with two windows of 6x6 lights on the north side of the front door. Above the door and northern window are matching windows illuminating each room upstairs. The roof line is accented by a cross gable pediment with an arc window of 6 lights.

Like the home of Charles Medley, this skeleton of a house is balloon frame and is sheathed with weatherboards that were probably painted white or whitewashed, as were most of the landowners' houses in this community, according to George S. Carroll (STMA-283), an oral informant. From the northern side of the rear length extends a two story ^L of one bay. The northern length of it was sheltered by a broad porch that is now sagging dangerously. The downstairs of the ^L served as the kitchen, and the upstairs as the sleeping quarters for the boys, as was the traditional arrangement

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This house is representative of one of the types of houses that black landowners built and occupied in the late 19th century. The plan as well as its construction materials (balloon frame) were commonly used by middle income farmers throughout Maryland during that period, and indicated the entry of this family into that social class.

It would be interesting to know if the arc window, molded trim, and other decorative features were ordered from a catalogue specifically for this house, ^{OR} if they were purchased from the nearest store and used because that was all that was available (see Stuckey House, Chas-328). No information sources ^{for} fro this house, however, could be found. At any rate, these features do reflect the increase in decoration made possible for middle income houses by the advances in manufacturing, marketing, and transportation in the last quarter of the 19th century.
